Key knowledge – Colonisation and trade

- Britain invaded and colonised many countries around the world (America, West Indies, Africa, India)
- The colonies improved the economy since they produced raw materials that could be traded
- As Britain colonized more countries, it became easier to export goods that could be bought more cheaply. They brought back materials such as cotton, tea, spices and silk.

India and The British Empire

- India was an important colony in the British Empire
- This was mainly because of TRADE (East India Company). The East India Company took control over many parts of the country
- Many were unhappy being ruled by a British Company

The Black Hole of Calcutta

- In 1757, the ruler of Bengal attacked and held a number of British prisoners overnight in a small cell in Fort William
- This became known as The Black Hole of Calcutta

The Seven Years' War

- Britain and France began fighting for colonies and trades in North America. This became known as The Seven Years' War
- The British acquired more land and became a "superpower"
- The French lost almost all land in North America
